Our Mission: To Seek, Know, Love and Serve Christ in all Persons and in all Creation

Ramblings from the Rev.....

When I get up in the morning now, it's dark. When I leave work in the evening, it's dark. I'm at peace with that. I love the long summer days. I love the dappled morning light peeking past the curtain edges and the sun's leisurely crawl to the horizon followed by twilight's steadily deepening hues. I love it. But as the days trend shorter, and I draw layers closer around me against the cold, and the temptation to climb into bed and hibernate under a down comforter grows, I notice the fleeting clear blue patches between clouds with renewed joy and my spirit soars to the heavens on a clear, cold night shining with crystalline stars.

Thinking about what needed to be said at this time, in this world, on this missive, my mind wandered through the shadows. It was drawn inexorably to COVID - the deaths, the fears, the toll on families and jobs and health and relationships. I thought also about the political maelstrom that assaults us at every turn. I thought about the inequity woven into the warp of our society. I thought about the growing struggle for those who live with addiction or mental illness. I thought about our besieged Earth. I thought about the multifaceted darkness that surrounds us. I thought about the layers of denial and repudiation we draw around ourselves for protection against that cold shadows of the world. I thought about the temptation to withdraw from the anger and the hurt and the disconnect - to snuggle into such personal coziness as we have available, hibernating until the wearying grey chill recedes.

Then Jesus again spoke to them, saying, "I am the Light of the world; he who follows Me will not walk in the darkness, but will have the Light of life." (John 8:12)

In the weariness, in the cold, in the darkness, the light of Christ shines. Shines in simple acts of kindness. Shines in people frantically working for that which is good and right and just and restorative. Shines in the givers, the peacemakers, the compassionate souls. Shines in the bright blue patches and the crystalline stars. Shines in your heart and mine - if we let it.

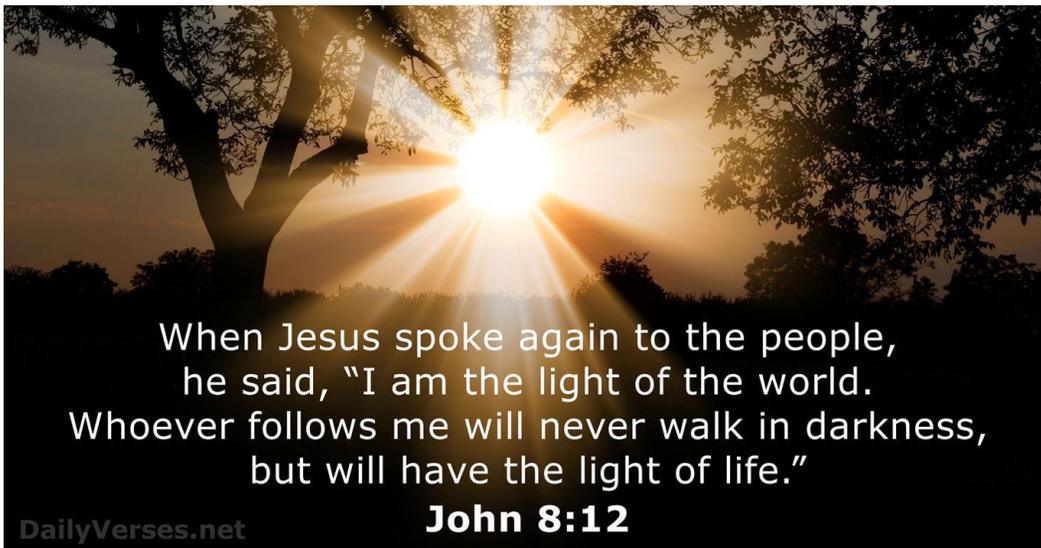

Bishop Steven Charleston offered these words, and I offer them now to you:

Receive the light. When the darkness gathers around you, when you grow weary, when your soul aches for the peace of years gone by, when you are afraid we have lost the trail and are walking deeper into the woods: that is exactly the time you need to receive the light. Don't hesitate. Don't doubt that it is there for you. Don't convince yourself that this darkness will be an endless night. It will not.

Remember a lesson you learned in your own experience: It is when things are darkest that light shines most brightly. Even an ember at midnight holds the promise of the dawn to come. Receive the light. It will restore you. It will heal you. It will empower you to welcome a new day. And even if that day has its own struggles and tests, it will be lived in the light, where we can see one another, trust one another, and do what must be done to reconcile this moment to the history we are making. Do not be afraid. Receive the light.

Blessings,

Dr. Sam+
